BLIZZARD ALERT

Reuters

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. The Northeast started digging out on Sunday after a blizzard dumped up to 40 inches of snow with hurricane-force winds, killing at least nine people and leaving hundreds of thousands without power.

New York City trucks plowed through residential streets, piling snow even higher at the edges and leaving thousands of motorists to dig their buried vehicles out from mountains of snow.

"I give up," Giovanni Marchenna, 52, of Manhattan said with a laugh.

"Looks like I'll be taking the subway to work until the snow melts," he added, noting he spent more than an hour shoveling snow.

On Monday, additional severe weather may bring more misery, with freezing rain and more snow predicted that would make the trip home for commuters even more difficult.

"It will make it a little more hazardous and a little more slick on the roads," said Kenneth James, a National Weather Service meteorologist based in Maryland.

In Boston, Mayor Tom Menino canceled Monday school after touring neighborhoods throughout the city, where 2 feet of snow fell.

"Our No. 1 priority today is getting to the side streets," he said, saying it was the fifth-deepest snowfall ever in the city.

Utility companies reported that some 350,000 customers were still without electricity across nine states after the wet, heavy snow brought down tree branches and power lines. About 700,000 homes and businesses were without power at one point Saturday.

Air traffic began to return to normal Sunday after some 5,800 flights were canceled Friday and Saturday, according to Flightaware.

MORE STORMS IN THE SOUTH

A tornado touched down in southern Mississippi on Sunday, injuring at least three people and causing significant damage, state officials said. As the storm system moved east, tornado warnings were in effect for parts of southeastern Mississippi and southwestern Alabama.

I was about two bites into my chocolate ganache when my blind date asked what I like to do for fun.

"Oh, you know ... read, sail, go out with my friends," I said. Obviously, I left out the part about watching "Teen Mom" via On Demand and shopping for cupcakes I later will pretend I made.

"Well," he began. "I'm really into anime conventions." Um ... ex-squeeze me?

Not all bad blind dates reveal themselves so quickly. Most take a little more work. Allow me to demonstrate.

Members of the King College Prep band mourn Hadiya Pendleton as the 15-year-old is laid to rest Saturday. CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

Persons of interest

Police question two men in Hadiya Pendleton's slaying

Chicago Tribune

Chicago police are questioning two persons of interest in the slaying of 15-year-old Hadiya Pendleton, a day after first lady Michelle Obama attended the funeral for the teenager whose death has become a symbol of escalating violence in Chicago, according to law enforcement sources.

The two men, one in his late teens and the other 20, were pulled over near East 67th Street and South Chicago Avenue late Saturday night or early Sunday morning after detectives canvassed the area and tracked down witnesses around the park where she was shot and killed

Jan. 29, the sources said. No charges have been filed.

Hadiya was fatally shot in Vivian Gordon Harsh Park, about a mile north of President Obama's Kenwood home on the South Side, a little more than a week after the King College Prep honor student performed with the band in Washington during inauguration festivities. Two other teens were wounded.

The shooting in the 4400 block of South Oakenwald Avenue happened after classes were dismissed for the day during finals week at King. Hadiya, a sophomore, was at the park with a group of teens, primarily other students from the school, when a male gunman climbed over a fence, ran to them and started firing, police have said. The shooter escaped in what has been described as white Nissan, possibly driven by an accomplice.

One of the sources said at least one of the men taken into custody was riding in a Nissan Sentra. The source didn't know that Nissan's color.

Police have insisted that the teens in Hadiya's group who had gathered in the park were not involved in gangs. But police have been looking into whether the gunman may have mistaken them for rival gang members.

While police and neighbors generally have described Harsh Park and its immediate surroundings as safe, there has been an internal gang conflict brewing in the area between factions of the Gangster Disciples, police said. The two men being questioned Sunday allegedly are members of the Gangster Disciples, sources said.

Obama to speak on city gun violence

Chicago Tribune

President Obama will visit Chicago on Friday to address the problem of gun violence as a part of a three-city tour after Tuesday's State of the Union address, according to the White House.

Obama will "talk about the gun violence that has tragically affected too many families in communities across Chicago and across the country," a White House official said in a statement, which noted he also would address economic issues.

The president's visit answers calls from Chicago anti-violence activists that Obama talk about the recent spate of gun violence in the city, several activists said.

"This is an important issue," said Cathy Cohen, founder of the Black Youth Project, which attracted about 45,000 signatures by Sunday night for an online petition that urges Obama to speak up.

The group posted the petition on change.org shortly after Hadiya Pendleton, 15, was shot to death last month at a South Side park. The King College Prep student was slain about a week after performing with her school band at Obama's inaugural festivities.

Since Hadiya was shot about a mile from the president's Kenwood home Jan. 29, during the deadliest January for Chicago since 2002, pastors, parents and activists have demanded that more be done about the city's violence.

State pumps brakes on city's bike lanes

Chicago Tribune

Mayor Emanuel's plan to install 100 miles of protected bicycle lanes in Chicago by 2015 is running into a speed bump thrown down by the state.

Streets where the Chicago Department of Transportation has installed or plans to build protected bike lanes include Jackson Boulevard, Clybourn Avenue, Diversey Parkway, Elston Avenue, Washington Boulevard, Adams Street, Archer Avenue and Pershing Road.

The protected lanes are designed to improve safety for cyclists by creating a physical barrier—a parking lane or flexible posts—between moving vehicles and bikes.

But in many of the selected locations, sections of the roadways fall under state jurisdiction. The Illinois Department of Transportation won't allow protected bicycle lanes to go on state-designated routes until it is satisfied they are safe, officials said.

IDOT will collect at least three years' worth of traffic accident data and then make a determination based on the analysis, officials said, adding that the existing data are inadequate because protected bike lanes are new here.

"We don't want to make decisions on a scatter shot basis. Our traffic engineers want to see more data on the impact of protected bike lanes," IDOT spokesman Mike Claffey said.

Claffey said IDOT has safety concerns that include the visibility of cyclists at intersections and operational issues like maintenance and snow-removal around protected bike lanes. Approving protected bike lanes for Chicago would open the floodgates to allowing all other local governments in the state to do the same, he said.

"We are also concerned about losing traffic lanes," Claffey said, noting that protected bike lanes require more space than traditional bike lanes.

IDOT's go-slow approach may win applause from some drivers who think Chicago is going overboard with its bike-hugging plan, especially on such thoroughfares as Dearborn Street downtown, where critics say a new configuration with two-way protected bike lanes makes traffic nearly immovable and dangerous for pedestrians.

But some transportation professionals say IDOT should let Chicago move forward with its plan.

"With about 60 traffic crashes every day in Chicago that result in injuries and fatalities, why would IDOT put the brakes on a proven traffic safety strategy?" said Ron Burke, executive director of the Active Transportation Alliance, which promotes greater use of alternative transportation.

City offers $1M reward for suspect's capture

Dorner

LOS ANGELES The city put up a $1 million reward Sunday for the capture and conviction of Christopher Dorner, a renegade former police officer they say has killed three people in a self-proclaimed war on his old department.

"We will not tolerate anyone undermining the security, the tranquility of our neighborhoods and our communities," L.A. Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa told reporters. "We will not tolerate this reign of terror that has robbed us of the peace of mind that residents of Southern California deserve. We will not tolerate this murderer remaining at large."

The offer—raised in conjunction with businesses, private donors and community groups—is "the largest ever offered, to our knowledge," L.A. Police Chief Charlie Beck said.

The police department says Dorner, a former Navy officer, was cashiered in 2009 for filing a false complaint of excessive force against his training officer. In an interview aired Sunday on CNN affiliate KCBS, Beck called Dorner a "trained assassin" but said he wouldn't be harmed if he gave himself up.

"If you turn yourself in, then you will be safe and nobody else has to die," he said. "If you don't, if you decide to try to take the life of another Los Angeles police officer or their family member, then you'll have to suffer the consequences."

The dragnet was in action Sunday around the Big Bear Lake resort, about 90 miles east of L.A., where investigators found Dorner's burning pickup Thursday afternoon. After working through a weekend of heavy snow and overnight temperatures in the single digits, police officers, sheriff's deputies and federal agents tried again to pick up Dorner's trail, San Bernardino County sheriff's spokeswoman Lehua Pahia said.

Tracie Ching's Michael Jordan print, one of four on sale at Galerie F in Logan Square this week.

50 shades of MJ

He's been around half a century, but Jordan's inspiration never gets old

By Jack M Silverstein

FOR REDEYE

Michael Jordan is back. In silk screen, that is.

In honor of Jordan's 50th birthday on Sunday, Logan Square's Galerie F (2381 N. Milwaukee Ave.) is hosting a monthlong Jordan exhibit featuring MJ-inspired screen prints from three Chicago artists plus one artist in Washington, D.C. The prints go on sale at 2 p.m. Monday at galerief.com and will be available in the gallery starting Tuesday.

RedEye spoke with two of the artists: Tracie Ching, 26, of Washington, D.C., and Galerie F founder Zissou Tasseff-Elenkoff, 30, of Logan Square.

Why did you participate?

Tracie Ching: The [1990s basketball] memories that burn brightest for me are those cheering for Michael Jordan while wrapped in my Chicago Bulls blanket. Like so many kids, I looked up to him, and that was the driving force behind this print—capturing the excitement, wonder and pride of watching an American icon and honoring a living legend on his 50th birthday.

Zissou Tasseff-Elenkoff: I've always been a big sports fan. You have your stars—the outstanding characters of physical prowess—but they do not dominate games like [Wayne] Gretzky and Jordan. With Jordan, he dominated his sport for years in talent, in his psychological approach and with his off-court personality.

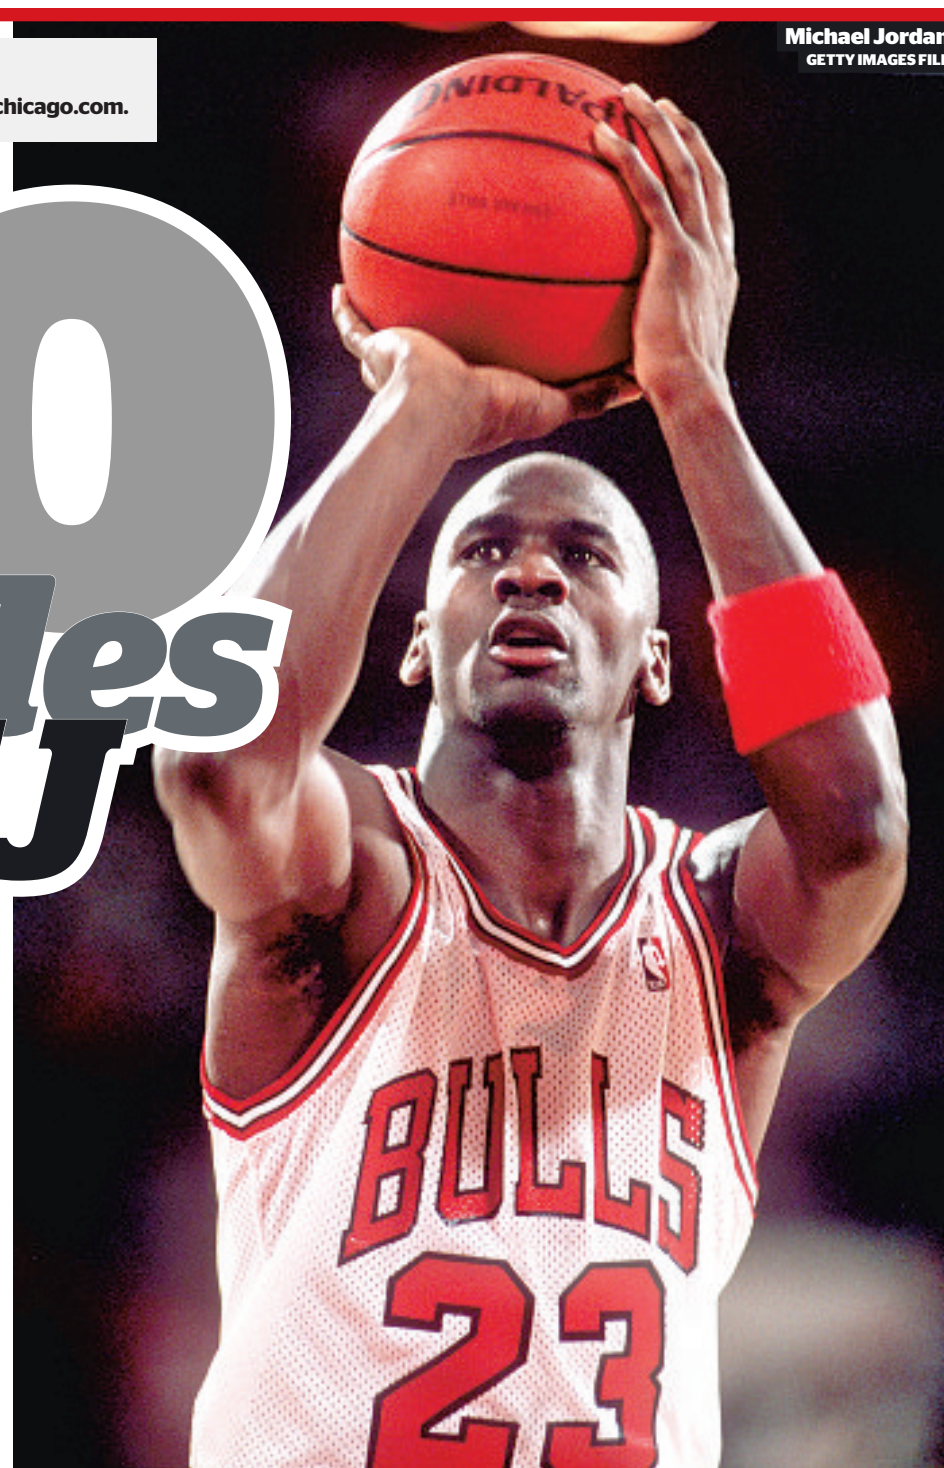

Staying up to 2 or 3 a.m. on school nights in London just to watch American sports, from a very young age, I grew to love those games as much as I had soccer. Jordan was an immensely important character during that time for me. When I moved to Chicago in 2002, I grew to learn how important Jordan and home team sports are to Chicago.

My Jordan piece is from a series that I began working on about four years ago: the Revolutionary Series, five iconic people in world culture who I deem to be revolutionary in their own way. I chose that image of Jordan because it wasn't iconic. It's a photo of him from when he played with his college team, and I believe playing in college may have meant a little more to him because it was his hometown he was playing for.

Favorite on-court MJ memory?

TC: You have to understand that I was very young at the height of Michael Jordan's career, so if I were to answer honestly, I would have to say my favorite on-court memory is MJ stretching to score the winning point against the Monstars [in "Space Jam"].

ZTE: There really are too many big plays to choose from. To say I like The Shot over Craig Ehlo and the Cavs better than the Flu Game? Or the shrug after knocking down six 3-pointers [in Game 1 of the 1992 Finals] was more memorable than the final shot and pose for the sixth championship in Utah? To choose one of those game moments over another is like saying who is your favorite child—it's blasphemy.

What is it about Jordan that makes him someone artists want to duplicate?

TC: It isn't really his physical appearance that makes him a great subject. Rather, it is what he represents. Michael Jordan is a symbol of what we can achieve: someone who can remind us to try harder, work harder, and strive for greatness. Who knows? Maybe one day we will be the Michael Jordan of something.

ZTE: MJ was just a master of his craft AND had his own unique style. He didn't just dominate the game; they were also wonderful to watch, like poetry in motion. There was flair and theatrics that went along with the substance. I think all artists can respect that about him and look to achieve that level of success in their own arena of life.

1 What's the first thing the Hawks will do on returning from their road trip?	Chicago Cut Steakhouse—the old 96er, medium rare, for a job well done.	Heroin. What, too dark? Ok, um ... hip-check into a hotel? Yeah, that's better ...	Make a run to Portillo's. Road trip food stinks.	Karaoke at Stanley's, I'm guessing.	Air out the family truckster. Isn't that what we all do after a long road trip?
2 How will fans at the UC greet the Bulls after their road trip?	With a new Spanish-themed Festival: "Running AWAY from the Bulls."	Hopefully with a dozen roses. Hell, at this point we just want one Rose.	With Italian beef sandwiches? Sorry, I'm just hungry right now.	Bearing "Countdown to the Return of Rose" signs?	By wearing their "I'm here for the Deng bang" T-shirts.
3 Antawn Jamison says Michael Jordan could still average double digits in the NBA. Thoughts?	Have you seen the Lakers play this season? I agree. Michael = God.	Antawn Jamison needs to stop popping Molly. Whoo!	Michael Jordan could average double digits while playing with a walker.	Never, ever bet against MJ.	He IS averaging double digits. After just 7 wins last year, the Bobcats have a whopping 11 wins this year.
4 When I hear "pitchers and catchers report," I think ...	... THIS IS OUR YEAR! Then I wake up from a loooooong bad dream!	... sheer happiness, then moderate fear that turns into despair. #WhiteSoxFanProblems	... pitchers of margaritas and catch the "EI" to Wrigleyville.	... so, the Cubs are really gonna go through with this whole baseball thing again, huh?	... switch hitters cannot be far behind.
5 How are Chicago sports like the Grammys?	The only thing colder than Chris Brown is the Cubs playing in July.	Both are prestigious, both are confusing, both are must-see events.	No one remembers who won in them the year before.	Most years the good parts barely make it worth watching the bad ones.	For every winner, there are four losers.

Ever since Kristin Cavallari told online.com that Jay Cutler proposed to the reality TV star via text message and later mailed her the engagement ring, we've been dying to know what those texts said. Somehow (OK, we're making it up) Red-Eye managed to get ahold of them. In honor of Valentine's Day, here's the greatest love story never told.

Jay: sup baby. Whatcha doing?

Kristin: OMG I'm at the airport headed back to Cali. U?

Jay: Oh, just practicing, trying to turn Devin Hester into a real receiver. LOL

Kristin: ??

Jay: Hey, do you ever think about hanging out in Chicago more than just on game days?

Kristin: Seriously, have u, like, felt how cold it is in Chi during November? U know how bad it makes my skin dry out.

Jay: Yeah, it's just—

Kristin: Plus I look sooooooo bad in big coats.

Jay: I just think you're pretty cool and really hot, you know?

Kristin: OMG Jay! That's like the nicest thing u ever said to me!

Jay: I'm trying to think of things to say to make you stay in town longer.

Kristin: Take me shopping on Michigan Ave? Invite Spencer and Heidi to come stay with us for a few days?

Jay: Haha, uh ... nah, what if we, I don't know, just got married or something?

Kristin: JAY CUTLER R U PROPOSING TO ME RIGHT NOW? OMFG!

Jay: Yeah, guess so.

Kristin: YES!!S& It's always been my dream to marry a QB!

Jay: K.

Kristin: Wish I could kiss u right now! HEY what about the ring???

Jay: I'll just toss it in the mail and send it to you in a couple days or something. Cool?

Kristin: AHH I'm SO EXCITED. I'm gonna have the biggest celebrity wedding ever. Can't wait to see u again!

Jay: Yeah baby, I miss you almost as much as Brandon Marshall.

TAKE A BITE OUTTA LOCHTE

L.A.'s Pink's Hot Dogs is naming a meal after Olympic swimmer Ryan Lochte. It will feature "Olympian Champion" onion rings and two hot dogs topped with:

- » Mustard
- » Chili
- » French fries
- » Nacho cheese

So in other words, the complete opposite of Chicago Style. Well, whatever floats his boat.

THE MOUTHWATCH

There were guys smoking weed before games. ... Guys are gambling. They're playing dice in the back of the plane for money. Like, we just lost by 30 tonight! And we've got a game tomorrow! It bugged me out."

—Former Bull Jay Williams, on his teammates smoking marijuana during his rookie season of 2002-03

THE DIGIT

30 This from the "LeBron James is really freaking good" department: On Sunday, he became the first Miami Heat player to score at least 30 points in five straight games. That's nice, but good luck overshadowing Michael Jordan, who turns 50 on Feb. 17.

grammys

Fun. makes it rain, Frank Ocean gets snubbed and Carrie Underwood lights up the stage

Criticize the Grammys if you must—I do frequently—but it's hard to deny the event remains music's biggest night ... at least when host LL Cool J reminds audiences of that constantly. Still, without an Adele-sized winner, Sunday's show belonged to Justin Timberlake, who didn't disappoint during his much-anticipated performance of the first two tracks from his upcoming "The 20/20 Experience" album.

In other talkable news, Mumford and Sons unjustly won Album of the Year (Frank Ocean or Black Keys or Jack White, come on), fun. even more unjustly won Best New Artist and Song of the Year and Gotye won Record of the Year for the inevitably overplayed but still good "Somebody That I Used To Know." Also, a cleavage-flaunting Katy Perry took advantage of the Grammys forgetting to forbid "inside boob," Wiz Khalifa added nothing to Miguel's exceptional performance and Chris Brown—no, not interested in talking about him.

Here were 10 of the night's most memorable moments from where I was sitting (my couch).

MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM | @MATTPAIS

Introduced by Beyonce and Ellen DeGeneres as a major event, Justin Timberlake (er, JT & the Tennessee Kids) appears with a huge band plus Jay-Z for "Suit & Tie," for which TVs switch to sepia. Even better: the soulful, horn-soaked falsetto of "Pusher Love Girl."

WINNER'S CIRCLE

Are there not, like, a million Grammy awards given out each year? Here are the ones we were watching. REDEYE

Record Of The Year
Somebody That I Used To Know
Gotye Featuring Kimbra

Album Of The Year
Babel
Mumford & Sons

Best New Artist
Fun.

Best Pop Vocal Album
Stronger
Kelly Clarkson

Best Rap Album
Take Care
Drake

«During Taylor Swift's "Alice in Wonderland"-inspired, just-OK performance of "We Are Never Ever Getting Back Together," she adjusts the talk-singing portion to say, "I'm sorry, I'm busy opening up the Grammys." Somewhere, Jake Gyllenhaal sheds a tear. Not really.

» Kelly Clarkson wins Pop Vocal Album, praises Fun., insults Miguel by saying she doesn't know who he is and then says his performance was the sexiest thing she's ever seen. Her speech is one of the night's most memorable, and her tribute performance later in the show is lovely.

» To the surprise of no one, the collaboration between Maroon 5 (performing "Daylight") and Alicia Keys (breaking the underboob rule while letting Adam Levine and Co. join in on "Girl on Fire") works no better in reality than on paper. Doing backup "whoa-ohs," Levine seems to be singing Billy Joel's "The Longest Time."

» Performing with Dr. John and the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, the Black Keys show what happens when a band participates in a collaboration that works. Their brassy, jubilant version of "Lonely Boy" is fantastic and blissfully untainted by, say, unnecessary Maroon 5 support.

» Sting joins Bruno Mars for "Locked Out of Heaven," as if to give him permission for shamelessly ripping off the Police. Since this is supposedly a Bob Marley tribute, Rihanna and Ziggy Marley appear to assist, effectively making Sting's place on stage doubly ridiculous.

» Following the immensely forgettable Lumineers, Jack White rejuvenates the show with, you know, actual quality. His performance turns the band that preceded him to dust, which is fitting since "Ho Hey" is essentially the sound of pixie dust blowing away.

» Honoring the late Levon Helm, the drummer/vocalist for the Band, Elton John, Mavis Staples, Alabama Shakes' Brittany Howard, Mumford and Sons and the Zac Brown Band gather for the Band's "The Weight" in a performance whose mild randomness doesn't interfere with its power.

«Some kind of twirly design (and roses and sparkly glitter business) is unwisely projected onto Carrie Underwood's dress during her performance. When an artist can hold attention with nothing but her voice, the gimmicks are distracting. Nice that, earlier, Rihanna went without the tricks.

It's a jungle out there on the Grammys red carpet

By now, you're probably familiar with the letter CBS issued to Grammy attendees regarding their attire, particularly addressing the "buttocks and female breasts." Don't worry, CBS, the only male breasts we want to see belong to Adam Levine. The rules technically applied to performance costumes only, but did red carpet-goers also abide by the restrictions? SURELY YOU JEST. Check out our patented racy-meter. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA | GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

“I wanted to keep the porny aspect away from this book. Every so often I would inadvertently head there, but my editor had a really firm leash on that, she would pull me back a bit.”

—Lisa Gabriele

Canadian pens erotic answer to ‘Fifty Shades’

Reuters

Canadian novelist Lisa Gabriele never felt she was especially good at writing sex scenes, but when an editor dared her to write an erotic novel to rival the wildly popular global hit “Fifty Shades of Grey,” she took up the challenge.

A week later she had some 40 pages written on “S.E.C.R.E.T.,” the just-published story of an underground society that helps women realize their wildest sexual dreams.

“I’d always written about men and women and relationships, but I’d always thought of it as leaving the sex at the bedroom door and shoving them in and saying, ‘OK, I’ll see you in the morning,’” said Gabriele, who wrote the novel under the pseudonym L. Marie Adeline. “I’d never really had the courage to tackle it.”

Right away, she had the idea that women should have the chance to explore a wider variety of sexual fantasies than the S&M at the core of “Fifty Shades,” the story of a naive student and a manipulative entrepreneur.

Enter S.E.C.R.E.T., a society that uses a 10-step program to bring alive the most secret fantasies and desires of its members. The goal? Sexual fulfillment.

Since Gabriele’s previous books, both Canadian bestsellers, dealt with quieter themes like coming-of-age and family dramas, she needed to do some research. Googling “Top 10 Female Sex Fantasies” helped, as did asking her friends.

“I was surprised by how forthcoming they were,” she said. “That was the wonderful thing about ‘Fifty Shades’—it actually got people talking in explicit detail about things. I’m sure they’d always read [erotic], but I don’t think they sat in book clubs and talked about being tied up.”

A reader of Harlequin Romances and other bodice-rippers in her youth, Gabriele found that writing the book turned out to be much easier and more fun than she expected, though maintaining the right balance was sometimes tricky.

“I didn’t want to make it dark, I didn’t want to use various words, the pornification of sex. I’m not a big porn consumer—I’m 45 years old, it’s not a big part of my life,” she said.

“I wanted to keep the porny aspect away from this book. Every so often I would inadvertently head there, but my editor had a really firm leash on that, she would pull me back a bit.”

Gabriele has a two-book deal for more erotica, and may write a third if the appetite is there.

“But I don’t know about a fourth,” she said. “By then I might want to go back to my quiet little family dramas.”

Secrets to get a celeb workout

MCT

The Oscars are coming up soon, and most of us will be checking out the bodies on the red carpet with envy. Here are fitness secrets from Mark Wahlberg's trainer, Brian Nyugen, and Valerie Waters, who's trained Kate Beckinsale, Jennifer Garner and other A-list celebs.

Valerie Waters

» Replace your crunches. Waters says you need to move on from crunches because they're ineffective and dangerous. The core was designed to stop movement in order to protect your spine. Crunches create the very movement that damages your lower back.

Instead of crunches, Waters uses a devilish menu of plank variation to sculpt A-list midsections. The key in all of these exercises is that the spine does not move, but the arms and legs do. In one plank version, move a knee up as far as you can without moving your lower back at all, and in the other move a hand forward as far as you can without letting your lower back or hips move. These are much tougher than they look, because all the effort is in preventing movement.

» Forget about putting hours in on the treadmill. Waters says her clients just don't have the time for ineffective exercise choices like jogging, so she has them do high-intensity interval training instead. This is because interval training takes two-thirds less time, is safer, and delivers far better results in less time.

Brian Nyugen

» Use a foam roller. Nyugen has all of his clients hit the foam roller before they workout (and often afterwards) to help them release knots in their muscles that can make certain exercises dangerous; and also because self-massage with a foam roller really enhances recovery.

» It's only exercise plus recovery that equals results. Results happen between workouts during your recovery period, so anything you can do to enhance that will yield better results and workouts.

NEIL SHUBIN

The Chicago Public Library welcomes popular science writer Neil Shubin, author of Your Inner Fish, for a discussion of his new book, The Universe Within, in which he takes an expansive approach to the question of why we look the way we do. The free program takes place on Monday, February 11 at 6 p.m. in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium, Lower Level, at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. This event is presented in partnership with the Illinois Science Council. For additional information, visit chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call 312-747-4050.

Literary Events & Literary Offerings! Every Saturday in Books. Advertise your literary event or offering here. Reach over 1.2 million Chicago adults every Saturday. Tribune readers are book enthusiasts with 74% of all Saturday readers visiting a book store in the past 12 months. Not only are Chicago Tribune readers more likely to purchase books, but they also spend 25% more than the Chicago market average. For advertising rates and deadlines, please call 312-222-4888. # ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The sun is bringing you loads of admirers, right when you'd been worried that you'd lost your charms. You could be sorting through hot-ties or cuties, testing each one out to see if you're compatible. Enjoy this sexual smorgasbord.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

A sensitive moon could have you weeping into your martini this week, wailing about lost love. But don't stay hung up on that guy who lied to you about being married. Things weren't meant to be.

Aries March 21-April 19

With the dawning of the Chinese New Year, you're feeling cranky. You don't do well with snake energies, and this is the year of the snake. Don't pick a fight with your partner.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Work issues are driving you nuts as Pluto reminds you that you want to do something else. Create a game plan to get from here to there. Run some ideas by a close friend, a part-time lover or your spouse.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You know you're fabulous and you're good at reminding people of this fact. But sometimes this stops being charming and heads into "majorly annoying" territory. Jupiter is reminding you to curb bad behavior to avoid remaining single.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Mars is increasing your sex drive. You'll pounce on anything that moves, plus some that don't. People aren't used to a shy Water sign acting aggressive. Have fun shocking a few people with your lusty outbursts.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

You're wondering if you can turn a casual friendship into something less casual and more sensual. A frisky moon is showing you that you have some strong feelings for a buddy, whether he or she knows it yet or not.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Don't make any major life decisions. A Mars opposition could cloud your vision about what you need to be doing. Don't get engaged if you've been in an up-and-down relationship. Take it easy.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You're a kind, considerate person. But this week the moon is bringing out the worst in people. Don't take it personally if your roommate freaks out at you or your longtime lover has a breakdown of some kind.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Your sexiest dream could come true, thanks to Saturn. If you've been hoping to seduce a hot acquaintance, you'll finally get your chance. If you were trying to get a former flame to fall in love with you again, you'll succeed.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Jupiter hasn't been treating you well lately. It's been opposite your sign for a while, and this is giving you an itch you can't quite scratch. You feel restless, annoyed and cranky. This isn't the best time to get married, plan to have a kid or adopt a pet.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You could be attracted to someone you meet through work. The moon is creating interactions with people who share your sense of discipline and commitment. You could meet a like-minded soulmate. Have fun.

Chinese Laundry shoe line

Role model?

K-Cav is strong, opinionated and fiercely defensive of her relationship with Cutler

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

Normally it's Kristin Cavallari supporting fiance and Bears quarterback Jay Cutler on game day from the suites at Soldier Field. But during Cavallari's promotional appearance on behalf of her Chinese Laundry shoe line Saturday at the Von Maur store in Yorktown Center in Lombard, it was Cutler, father to their 6-month-old son, Camden, playing the supporting role.

Cutler waited in the next room as Cavallari met with media in the employee lounge and discussed the women's shoe line she said she's been dreaming of designing since she was 19, and he was on hand as she posed for photos with her mostly female fans, some of whom began lining up for the 2:30 p.m. appearance when the store opened at 10 a.m.

"I think a lot of girls look up to me because I'm a strong woman," Cavallari, 26, said of her appeal. "I say what's on my mind. I go after what I want. In that sense, I'm a good role model. [Also,] when I was in high school and on TV, girls that were my age were going through the same problems I was and could relate to me."

Cavallari's love life has always been a hot topic among tabloids. Also, she elevated her profile over the years by making cameos on CBS's "CSI: NY," FX's "The League" and UPN's "Veronica Mars" and competing with ABC's "Dancing With the Stars." And then there are those sharp opinions of hers, which turned her into a reality TV villain and helped her stand out. She has said in interviews that she was playing up her reputation on "The Hills," but as her 1 million-plus Twitter followers can tell you, she's not afraid to speak her mind.

Still, Cavallari said you shouldn't expect her to single out Cutler's teammates or opponents in public.

"I think it's probably best I stay out of that area," Cavallari said. "It's very easy for me to lose my mind. But out of respect for Jay and the profession, I don't think it's my place to say anything."

Cavallari will, however, stand up to sports fans and writers who question their personal life. When the sports world mocked Cutler last week over the E! story that he proposed to Cavallari via text message and sent her the ring via mail, a frustrated Cavallari took to Twitter to point out that Cutler had proposed the first time around in Cabo San Lucas (they called off their first engagement months later but are now set to wed sometime this year).

"I get so heated," Cavallari said. "I could sit here and say it doesn't bother me, but it does bother me. It makes me so mad writers can write whatever they want and get away with it and people will believe it. Some people really only read headlines. And from there it's an awful game of telephone."

That's how many episodes of "Do No Harm" aired on NBC before the network canceled the show, ew.com reports.

Box office burglar

Melissa McCarthy stole the show at the box office this weekend. "Identity Thief," her comedy co-starring Jason Bateman, debuted with a robust $36.6 million, according to an estimate from distributor Universal Pictures. That's the biggest opening of the year thus far, beating Universal's "Mama," the horror film that debuted with $28.4 million in January.

Later, Christina

Christina Applegate is a go for the "Anchorman" sequel. Not so much for the second season of "Up All Night," the sitcom in which she and Will Arnett played new parents. Applegate confirmed to deadline.com that she is leaving the show, which puts the entire endeavor—which also stars Maya Rudolph—up in the air.

Turning the Page

Our little June Bug is all grown up. Ellen Page is making her directorial debut, and she has Anna Faris lined up as her lead actress, deadline.com reports. "Miss Stevens" centers on the plight of a teacher who chaperones a group of high school kids on a weekend trip to a drama competition and rediscovers herself in the process.

Ready to swim?

And the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue cover model is ... Kate Upton's enormous boobs! To be fair, the rest of Upton also appears on the cover. It's just that ... well, just look at the cover! Upton and nine other SI swimsuit models will appear Monday on "Late Night with David Letterman." The issue will hit stands the next day.
